PREFACE
NAQSRO/August 2001

The listed organizations have provided NIST with information on their quality system registration activities for the ASQ (American Society for Quality) Q9000 series, the ISO (International Organization for Standardization) 9000 * series, QS (Quality Systems)-9000, ISO (International Organization for Standardization) 14000 EMS (Environmental Management Systems) or equivalent criteria such as TL (Telecommunications) 9000, TS (Technical Specification) 16949, HACCP (Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point) and SA (Social Accountability) for the United States, Canada and Mexico. NO ATTEMPT HAS BEEN MADE TO EVALUATE ANY OF THESE PROGRAMS. Interested parties are advised to review and compare the offered services (particularly the registrar's scope of accreditation as indicated) when selecting a program appropriate to their needs. In addition to the specific entries, this directory contains a Table of Contents along with Appendices including a Glossary. For additional information, contact:

Michael Squires

- NOTE: The ISO 9000 (1994) * series was revised and reissued in December 2000. Companies should be aware that the changes made may affect the time required to achieve conformance to the standard.
- Additional information on ISO 9000-related activities may be found on the U.S. ISO member ANSI (American National Standards Institute) website at www.ansi.org.
- Training for transitioning to the new ISO 9001: 2000 is offered by many registrars represented in these pages as well as by other organizations. Consult individual registrars and training bodies for details.
- Additional information on the ISO 9000: 2000 and related standards is available on the NIST (National Institute of Standards and Technology) website at: <http://ts.nist.gov/ca>.

- Visit www.rabnet.com for information on the American National Standards Institute (ANSI)-Registrar Accreditation Board (RAB) National Accreditation Program (NAP) and the RAB certification program for assessors.

Disclaimer: Entries in this directory are based on information provided by each organization and reflect the organization's view of its activities. No attempt was made by NIST to verify the information provided by the listed organizations.
